Party games go digital

Party games are the most popular and in demand category of board and card games

It is often difficult for a group of friends to all get together; today there are a lot of intricate ways to play these games remotely. But they are not centralized and, in general, not very convenient.

Existing applications designed to solve similar problems have limited functionality and a very small selection of available games.

Friends in quarantine play the wonderful "Just One" and other games remotely

On any device

Advanced dice thrower and sound alerts system

Smart clock to control time

Tasks zone supports text, graphics, and video

In development: game table and players' hand, built-in audio mixer, in game video special effects and much more...

Video conference with victory points and participant's status

Flexible voting system

Smart chat and quest zone allow you to specify which information you show and with whom you show it

The games in the catalog are divided into three categories:

Fully automated - the system determines player turns, shows tasks, and if necessary - starts a timer and awards victory points.

Tasks only - players control the game and have access to tasks or other prepared game content. The system will ensure that tasks are not repeated whenever possible.

Sandbox - in this mode, players have full freedom to use all available tools. This is an opportunity to play your own game, play by house rules and use your own tasks, adapted to the play style of your group.

Quick start. Watch a short video with the game rules and start the game.

Business model and working with publishers

The Festa economic model is based on selling “game sessions” - access to a private game lobby for 72 hours for a company of up to 6 people. You can buy both one-time access or have a monthly subscription with many “game sessions” at a discounted price.

We will pay 50% of our revenue to publishers in proportion to the amount of time users spend playing games of all publishers.

Income: payments of users minus commissions of payment systems and taxes, as well as a subtracted share of expenses for the technological provider of video communications - VoxImplant

The integration of games on the platform is carried out by us free of charge. For the most promising games, we also do full automation ourselves. And later, special tools for self publishing will be created.

In the game catalog for all the products there will be links to the publisher's website, as well as the ability to purchase a physical version of the game. We are planning a large-scale promotion of both the system as a whole and the games of our partners.
